WINEMAKING PROCESS

The grapes are picked by hand. They are sorted first at the plot, and then again upon arrival at the cellar. The bunches are cooled before pressing to preserve aromas and color.

The Syrah and Vermentino varieties, which reached optimum maturity at the same time, were blended in the press. Only the free run juice was kept in alcoholic fermentation. The Mourvèdre, which matured later, was vinified in 600 liter and 15 hectoliters oak casks, and then aged for two months on fine lees. This particularity for a rosé wine brings complexity and originality to the final blend.

The Terre des Anges rosé is a rich and elegant wine worthy of the world's most beautiful tables.

TASTING NOTES

The robe is elegant and translucent. Powerful and complex nose favored by barrel fermentation. Aromas of red fruits (strawberry) are enhanced by subtle peach notes. Robust on the palate with generous red fruits and a nice softness. It strikes a fine balance between rich and ethereal.

The recommended storage period : 1-2 years.

« With a dominance of Syrah and Mourvèdre, this is a rich, structured rosé. It has a strong character of ripe, juicy red fruits, as well as intense, tangy and refreshing acidity. The wine will be best in a few months, so wait until late 2020.»

«The 2019 Coteaux d'Aix en Provence Rose Terre des Anges is 70% Syrah, 20% Mourvèdre and 10% Vermentino (Rolle). That's unusual for Provence rosé, but it makes for a pale pink wine that combines crushed stone, floral notes, red berries and citrus. It's medium-bodied on the palate, with ample concentration, intense flavors that follow the nose, a silky feel on the palate and a lingering finish. This is clearly one of the best rosés to come out of the appellation, from one of the top estates in the Coteaux d'Aix.» JOE CZERWINSKI, may 2020.
